This is the work where you'll build the skills that help change the course of a child's life

Looking for a career that helps people? We're Frontline, a charity working to make life better for children who have social workers.

Join our Frontline programme and become a children's social worker. You'll help keep children safe from harm and create positive change for them and their families.

On the Frontline programme, you'll get three years of paid training and support. You'll learn life-changing skills while working in a local council social work team, putting theory into practice. You'll qualify as a social worker and complete a fully-funded master's degree. With the support of experienced social workers and your peers, you'll learn how to work with families to protect vulnerable children.

£18-20k tax-free bursary in year one.
Up to £34k salary from year two.

We won't lie; it's a challenging profession. You'll help families living in the toughest circumstances and struggling with a range of pressures. But it's also one of the most rewarding careers. The programme is designed to give you the support you'll need to thrive in the role, and the work you do will change lives for the better.

This is the work that makes a difference.
